

This article was downloaded by: [Old Dominion University]

On: 29 December 2011, At: 08:34

Publisher: Routledge

Informa Ltd Registered in England and Wales Registered Number: 1072954
Registered office: Mortimer House, 37-41 Mortimer Street, London W1T 3JH,
UK

Contemporary Security Policy

Publication details, including instructions for authors and subscription information:

<http://www.tandfonline.com/loi/fcsp20>

Preface

Peter Schmidt & Benjamin Zyla

Available online: 15 Dec 2011

To cite this article: Peter Schmidt & Benjamin Zyla (2011): Preface, Contemporary Security Policy, 32:3, 481-481

To link to this article: <http://dx.doi.org/10.1080/13523260.2011.623048>

PLEASE SCROLL DOWN FOR ARTICLE

Full terms and conditions of use: <http://www.tandfonline.com/page/terms-and-conditions>

This article may be used for research, teaching, and private study purposes. Any substantial or systematic reproduction, redistribution, reselling, loan, sub-licensing, systematic supply, or distribution in any form to anyone is expressly forbidden.

The publisher does not give any warranty express or implied or make any representation that the contents will be complete or accurate or up to date. The accuracy of any instructions, formulae, and drug doses should be independently verified with primary sources. The publisher shall not be liable for any loss, actions, claims, proceedings, demand, or costs or damages whatsoever or howsoever caused arising directly or indirectly in connection with or arising out of the use of this material.

Preface

This special issue would not have been possible without the gracious help, assistance, and wisdom of a number of people and institutions. To start with, some of the papers within originate from the annual conference of the Centre for International Relations at Queen's University held in 2008, which assessed the progress and prospects of the European Security and Defence Policy ten years after the seminal Franco-British summit meeting at Saint-Malo. A total of 17 specialists in matters of European security and defence came together for two days of discussion to examine the twenty-plus military and civilian operations that the EU has conducted under ESDP since 2003. Thanks, therefore, go to the Centre for International Relations at Queen's University, Canada (QCIR), and in particular Charles Pentland and Maureen Bartram for their tireless work organizing and running it.

We would also like to thank the authors of the papers that follow. Without them, this special issue may not have been possible, would certainly look much different, and possibly would not even have materialized. Some joined at a very short notice, while another laboured from his sickbed while recovering from a heart attack and a ligament rupture. We are very grateful for all of their contributions.

Above all, however, this special issue would not have been possible without Regina and Aaron Karp, the two editors of Contemporary Security Policy. Special thanks goes to them for their wisdom, enthusiasm, and encouragement from the first moment that we proposed this project. It has been wonderful working with you – thank you!

Peter Schmidt
Benjamin Zyla

The managing editors extend their appreciation to the guest editors of this special issue, Peter Schmidt and Benjamin Zyla, for their vision, engagement and camaraderie, and to the European Union and AccessEU, an EU-funded project at Old Dominion University, for making the publication of this issue possible.